

SB Vietnam Memorial 37th Year as Prideful as the First

South Boston Today – Staff Report

Thirty Seven Years and the crowds still turn out en masse. The dedicated committee members still work hard and with great passion to make sure their fallen comrades are never forgotten and that every detail of the event is set to perfection.

The dignitaries still travel to the neighborhood from far and wide to be part of this solemn and sacred, yet uplifting, ceremony. The weather; perhaps with assistance from Heaven above, always seems to cooperate. And it all happened yet again last Sunday at Medal of Honor Park for the 37th rededication of the South Boston Vietnam Memorial.

The annual rededication is a true test of love, loyalty and pride. These are things that South Bostonians, whether current or former, have always had in abundance. Just witnessing how the enthusiasm of last Sunday’s gathering is as strong as it was 37 years ago, as the neighbor-

You Can't Park Here, Rosie O'Donnell is Filming

From the reaction of some neighbors, it's confirmed that many people were not too happy with being told – again, that they couldn't park on their own streets. Streets that they pay taxes for, because those very limited parking spots had to be reserved for film crews. Said one irate neighbor: "It's not bad enough that we're told to keep our vehicles off our own blocks. But what makes it worse is it's because 'Showtime' is in town filming a TV show that makes our town look bad. How's that for irony? Is South Boston the only town Hollywood enjoys trashing?"

As many know, the TV series called SMILF, featuring Rosie O'Donnell as a Southie mother called 'TuTu' is in the process of filming its new season. It enjoys some degree of popularity, while many say they find it insulting to the neighborhood. And while there are some who still seem to find Ms. O'Donnell funny and entertaining, there are others who would like nothing better than to see her on a one-way trip to Canada by bus – to put it nicely. O'Donnell's presence might be the main reason for the complaints.

But the questions to be asked is what are the guidelines for film companies coming into a neighborhood with far too little parking to begin with and forcing taxpayers to park sometimes 8-10 blocks away, if they can get a spot at all?

Do residents have input in these decisions and if not, why not? We get it.

The entertainment world has this fascination with South Boston. But, when they roll in with huge convoys of giant trucks and force people to keep their cars away sometimes for days, it becomes a burden that is starting to grate on many residents. Is it time for Hollywood to find another town to focus on. Let us know what you think.

“Obama is like a guy who couldn’t open a jar for 8 years. Trump came along and opened the jar then Obama said – well, I loosened it for you”. This was a quote from a political pundit that went viral after last week’s emergence from God knows where of former President Barack Obama. He apparently thought he would come back with a bang and shake up the political landscape. After making 3 or more speeches, it’s clear he should have stayed home.

Among the dumbest and most ridiculous statements he made in recent days was his response to the decision by his close friend, Mayor of Chicago Rahm Emanuel. Mayor Emanuel announced that he would not seek reelection. To which Obama replied that Emanuel as mayor, has made Chicago “stronger and better”. Say WHAT?? Even some of the most die-hard Obama supporters had to be snickering at that whopper. That city has become a basket case, overrun with illegal alien gang members and criminals, as a result of Emanuel’s stated policy that Chicago will always be a Sanctuary City and it’s a safer place because of that Sanctuary City status.

The press makes any mass shooting in America of ‘three or more people shot’ almost anyplace, into a lead story. Yet seldom, if ever, is there a mention that in Chicago, there are mass shootings every weekend. Recently there were 70 people shot in a weekend, 40 people within just a 7-hour period. The place is a battlefield. The police are often under siege and, in many areas there, it’s not safe to step out of your home even in the day time. Emanuel is resigning because he can’t handle it.

His Socialist policies and incompetence caused most of the problems and he knows it. But Obama, never one to let truth get in the way of a flowery speech, acted like the ‘windy city’ is a paradise.

Then, at the University of Illinois, he attacked the state of the US economy under President Trump, then took credit for the booming economy under Trump all in the same speech implying that it’s actually because of his 8 years in office that it’s doing so well now. (See the opening quote at the top of this column).

But what must have been a shock to his enormous ego, he travelled to California to make another speech, where 10,000 people were expected to turn but less than 900 actually showed up. Clearly, the magic has faded and the spell he once had over his once devoted followers has been broken.

The other big political story last week was of course the confirmation hearings for Judge Brett Kavanaugh’s nomination to the US Supreme Court. Much of the nation was embarrassed at what took place as grown ‘adults’, acting like undisciplined children, shouted, screamed and stamped their feet, yelling obscenities in desperate juvenile efforts to stop or at least obstruct the proceedings. Some of them even harassed the wife and young children of Kavanaugh, to the point that his daughters had to be escorted out of the building for their safety.

70 protesters were arrested on the first day and some were caught on video outside actually being paid off in cash for their actions. By the way these protesters were acting, if they arrived at the hearings with a dozen or more jammed into tiny cars like the painted clowns at a three ring circus, it probably would not be a surprise to anyone.

One of the most memorable standouts was the woman wearing a T-Shirt, emblazoned with the words ‘Hate Free Zone’, screaming and yelling at Judge Kavanaugh that he was a “F...n A..hole and needed to die”. Aren’t they just special people? And they call Trump supporters, haters?

And yet, throughout all the turmoil caused by the protesters and the theatrics by some of the Democrat senators, Judge Kavanaugh maintained an extraordinary discipline and dignity and displayed his deep and extensive knowledge of the law and would not back off his commitment to defending the US Constitution. And that’s what Supreme Court Justices are supposed to do – follow the Constitution. If he is confirmed, as he should be, the good guys will have added another great one to the highest court in the land and America will be that much closer to becoming even greater than ever.

Window Into The State House

Window Into The State House provides our readers a synopsis of important issues of interest, past and current, that are being proposed, debated or acted upon by the Massachusetts Legislature. Many issues that are not related to local city government services are acted upon and have a direct impact on daily life. They are tax policy, transportation infrastructure, judicial appointments, social services and health, as well as higher education. We will excerpt reports from the gavel-to-gavel coverage of House and Senate sessions by news sources focused on this important aspect of our lives. These sources include a look ahead at the coming week in state government and summaries and analyses of the past week, re-caps of a range of state government activity, as well as links to other news.

Remembering 9/11 ...

There were numerous 9/11 remembrance ceremonies across the state yesterday, including one at the State House, where Andrew Card, former chief of staff for President George W. Bush, was the keynote speaker and recalled the events of that terrible day 17 years ago. His message: Never forget.

Other solemn ceremonies were held in, among other places, West Bridgewater and Acton. The Enterprise has a piece on the two Bridgewater "snow angels" who received bravery awards named after a flight attendant on one of the hijacked planes flown into the World Trade Centers.

Marijuana growers threaten lawsuit over local pot agreements

A group representing the state's marijuana growers says it is prepared to head to court to force the Cannabis Control Commission to review whether communities are demanding too much when negotiating local pot license agreements, SHNS's Colin Young reports at MassLive. With the CCC saying state law does not clearly give it the authority to rule on such agreements, Peter Bernard of the Massachusetts Grower Advocacy Council tells Young "it's going to take a judge to sort it out."

Meanwhile, CCC chairman Steven Hoffman said yesterday that "it's possible" the commission could finally green-light some retail pot shops when it meets on Sept. 20, reports Tori Bedford at WGBH.

Pressure builds on Cardinal O'Malley over sex-abuse allegations

He seemed safe from criticism — until recently. The Herald's Mary Markos reports on the mounting criticism of how Cardinal Sean P. O'Malley has handled recent clergy sexual-abuse allegations. The criticism comes only days after U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren dared to mention the equivalent of the "r" word (i.e. resign) if it's shown O'Malley was aware of assault allegations at a Catholic seminary in Brighton, as WGBH's Tori Bedford reports.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press at the Herald is reporting this morning that Pope Francis is "summoning the presidents of every bishops conference around the world for a February summit to discuss preventing clergy sex abuse and protecting children."

Study: Transgender law didn't lead to crime wave, mayhem and gang wars in public bathrooms

It was a bogus argument from the start — and this just confirms it. From the Globe's Stephanie Ebbert: "A first-of-its-kind study being released Wednesday refutes the premise that the state's transgender antidiscrimination law threatens public safety, finding no relation between public transgender bathroom access and crimes that occur in bathrooms." Btw: We had never heard of "restroom crime reports" until now. You learn something new every day.

The tie-Baker-to-Trump strategy: Can it work for Democrats?

The Herald's Joe Battenfeld doesn't think Democrats' attempt to link Republican Gov. Charlie Baker to Donald Trump will work, calling it a desperate political strategy to topple a popular governor. But the Globe's Joan Vennoch thinks it's a legitimate issue, considering Baker's effective endorsement of Republican U.S. Senate candidate Geoff Diehl, an ardent Trump supporter. The Herald's Kimberly Atkins writes that polls indeed show that Trump has become a net political negative for Republicans across the country.

Meanwhile, Lively mulls 'campaigning actively' against Baker

Republican Gov. Charlie Baker is getting pounded by Democrats for his indirect ties to Donald Trump. Now he's getting pounded by far-right pastor Scott Lively for not being close enough to Donald Trump. Lively, who lost to Baker last week in the GOP gubernatorial primary, says he'll decide by tomorrow whether he'll be "campaigning actively" against Baker this fall, report SHNS's Katie Lannan and Colin Young.

Lively's ultimate goal? Defeating Baker and thus clearing the way for a "conservative pro-Trump revolution to re-take the Mass GOP and the legislature in 2020, and the governorship in 2022." You gotta hand it to him: He's delusional, but he dreams big. Btw: The Herald's Michael Graham is wondering who's in charge of the state Republican party these days.

Gonzalez goes after Baker over poor condition of T properties

Now this is a legitimate issue. Whether it has traction is another matter. From Adam Vaccaro at the Globe: "The poor condition of MBTA stations, garages, and other facilities across Greater Boston suddenly emerged as a campaign issue in the race for governor Monday, as Republican incumbent Charlie Baker and his Democratic challenger, Jay Gonzalez, traded blame over the state of the system."

Fyi: Separately, MBTA board member Brian Lang is demanding that the agency explain how it's going to address the chronic delays on the Chelsea-Boston

Massport Supports Summer Jobs for South Boston Students

BOSTON – More than 35 South Boston students earned a paycheck this summer thanks to the Massachusetts Port Authority's Community Summer Jobs Program. Now in its 27th year, Massport's program supported 40 South Boston high school and college students in summer jobs with community organizations.

This summer, 352 area high school and college students earned a paycheck through our Community Summer Jobs Program. We funded 40 summer jobs at South Boston organizations including: Condon Community Center, Curley Community Center, Labouré Center, McDonough Sailing Center, South Boston Boys & Girls Club, South Boston Neighborhood House, Stretch Walsh Community Center and Tynan Community Center. For many young people, these summer jobs marked the start of an educational path and a career.

Massport's Community Summer Jobs Program is designed to help civic and social service agencies by providing funds to support youth employment in communities where Massport facilities are located -- Charlestown, Chelsea, East Boston, Revere, South Boston, Winthrop, Bedford, Concord, Lexington, Lincoln and Worcester.

"Our Community Summer Jobs Program employs hundreds of hardworking students from communities that are important to Massport," said Massport CEO Thomas P. Glynn. "The jobs give these young people a chance to earn an income and gain skills from hands-on experience in their communities."

Participating organizations are responsible for recruiting, interviewing, hiring and supervising student employees. Since Massport's Community Summer Jobs Program started in 1991, thousands of summer jobs have been funded allowing local high school and college students the opportunity to gain valuable job skills while serving their community.

The Massachusetts Port Authority (Massport) owns and operates Boston Logan International Airport, public terminals in the Port of Boston, Hanscom Field, and Worcester Regional Airport. Massport is a financially self-sustaining public authority whose premier transportation facilities generate more than $15 billion annually, and enhance and enable economic growth and vitality in New England. Councilor Flynn Calls For Eversource Plan

Due to recent power outages and manhole fires that occurred across the district, Boston City Councilor Ed Flynn is calling on Eversource to come up with a plan to meet the public's increased demand for power during heat waves. Councilor Flynn will be calling for a hearing on this issue in the coming weeks at the City Council.

"I spoke with constituents regarding recent power outages, some of whom rely on oxygen tanks. When it comes to heat waves, I am very concerned about the safety of our residents; in particular our seniors, children, the disabled, as well as our pets. This has been an ongoing issue for our community for some time, not just in heat waves," said Flynn. "Since we are all paying customers of the utility companies, our communities deserve to receive reliable service. Moreover, I do not believe that those residents affected should be charged for the outages that took place."

Flynn believes that Eversource must be candid with the community regarding whether older transformers and power lines need to be replaced, how they plan on upgrading the power source to handle the needs of the public, and what steps are taken to use generators to restore power while repairs are being made.

"In the coming weeks, I will be calling for a hearing to examine our infrastructure and whether all necessary steps are being taken to deliver power to customers. I respectfully request that Eversource come up with a concrete plan for necessary upgrades for our neighborhood. The time has come for our utility companies to invest in this infrastructure to meet the demand of increased development that has taken place in South Boston over the last couple of decades."

For more information, please contact Councilor Flynn's office at 617-635-3203 & Ed.Flynn@Boston.Gov.

SETTING: Small public safety campus police management office.

PROPS: One large conference table/six chairs/laptops/copy machine/office cubicles.

Robert Can Do and Robert Can't Do are sitting across from each other at the table doing work.

Robert Can Do: Bobby, I need you to call Paul Harvey and set-up a meeting with him concerning the new security radios.

Robert Can't Do: He's too busy.

Robert Can Do: Really?

Robert Can't Do: I really doubt if he's available to meet with us.

Robert Can Do: (frustrated) Bobby, I said call him and tell him I need to meet with him someday next week. No excuses.

Robert Can't Do: Okay...I'll try.

Robert Can Do Don't try. Get it done.

Two Hours Later

Robert Can Do: Bobby, call Joe McKenna at the uniform company and tell him I need eight new uniforms and twenty shirt patches for the new officers who start in two weeks.

Robert Can't Do: Oh, he'll never be able to do that.

Robert Can Do: Why not?

Robert Can't Do: We have to wait at least six months before we can even get short sleeve shirts, never mind full uniforms. His company gets all their stuff from Canada.

Robert Can Do: Bobby! Bobby! Listen to me! Tell him I need the uniforms by next week or I'll buy them from somewhere else.

Robert Can't Do: You know these things take time.

Robert Can Do: Bobby, just do it!

Robert Can Do whisper's under his breath, "Canada my ass!"

One Hour Later

Robert Can Do: Bobby, get a hold of Peter O'Toole from Allied Alarm and tell him I need a quote for a new fire alarm panel. And call two other companies and set up a walkthrough.

Robert Can't Do: He won't do it. Nobody will give us quotes.

Robert Can Do: Why not? They don't want to make money?

Robert Can't Do: They won't do it. It's not worth it to them.

Robert Can Do: Are you out-of-your mind?

Robert Can't Do: I wouldn't lie to you.

Robert Can Do: Just call until you get three alarm companies that will come in. It's not rocket science.

BEWARE – Fentanyl-Laced Cocaine

As if fentanyl-laced heroin isn't bad enough, the opioid crisis has been exacerbated by the introduction of fentanyl-laced cocaine.

It was recently reported that the Neighborhood Health Plan aims to reduce the number of opioid overdose deaths by increasing access to treatment. First, by offering financial incentives to encourage more providers to offer medication-assisted treatment involving Suboxone and other buprenorphine products designed to treat cravings and withdrawal systems associated with opioid dependency. Second, they are hiring recovery coaches, waiving co-pays for the overdose reversal drug naloxone (brand-name version Narcan) and also reminding pharmacists to notify NHP members that they are eligible for free Narcan supplies when they pick up a prescription for high-dose narcotic painkillers.

Now to the warning - According to a recent report by the Department of Public Health, the first three months of 2018 was the second quarter in a row that cocaine surpassed heroin in the toxicology for opioid-related deaths. Meanwhile, the rate of overdoses related to heroin has decreased from 2014 to 2018. But, there has been an alarming increase in the rate of overdoses that have tested positive for fentanyl, with a staggering 90 percent of all overdose deaths in 2018 through March testing positive for this drug. It presents as the changing nature of the narcotics epidemic.

A total of 1,977 people in 2017 and 2,155 people in 2016 died of suspected or confirmed opioid overdoses in Massachusetts, according to the most recent data from the Department of Public Health. Drug users have mixed heroin and cocaine purposefully in the past in what is known as a "speedball." Dealers may also be purposefully mixing fentanyl with cocaine without the buyer's knowledge, because it's a cheap way to give a product more kick.

The Commonwealth re-issued a June clinical advisory to physicians, informing providers that those needing treatment for substance use disorder may have a problem with any number of drugs, and asked providers to educate clients and staff regarding the presence of fentanyl in cocaine.

According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, there was a sharp increase in the estimated number of overdose deaths involving cocaine nationally from 2016 to 2017, from approximately 10,000 deaths in 2016 to 14,556 in 2017 – an astounding 45% increase.

Beware. The war on drugs wages on. Families, schools, the medical community, the recovery community, the churches, the government are invested in ridding society of this insidious scourge in as dedicated an effort as those fighting cancer and other diseases. The differential is the mental health aspect of one's decision to enter this black hole. Perhaps therein lies the awareness necessary to re-focus the attention of well-meaning advocates in the way we attack the root causes.

Two Hours Later

Robert Can Do: Bobby, call the Fire Department and set up a meeting with the safety officer regarding fire drill procedures.

Robert Can't Do: They won't do it! I know they won't. They wouldn't do it for me when I worked at Colton's and I managed a $15 million-dollar budget and thousands of employees.

Robert Can Do: Bobby, set it up. They do it for every other agency in the city. It's mandatory.

The Wine Guy

Hurricane Checklist

You'd have to be a hermit not to know that it's Hurricane Season again, so let's take a moment to make sure that we have the essentials at home to ride out any storm successfully. First, you want to have some good, flexible red wines on hand; in case you lose power, they can be served at room temperature! If you have to evacuate, take them with you; they won't go bad.

Here are a few for you to keep on hand during the storms or in your "bug out bag" if you have to go:

ACHAVAL-FERRER CABERNET SAUVIGNON 2013, Mendoza, Argentina, ($21.99), this Cabernet from the Mendoza region of Argentina delivers a sharp and direct message where the fruit overcomes the mineral nuances. Originating from small patches of vineyards located in the first area in Mendoza, this wine is a small production label that highlights a juicy texture filled with black and red fruitiness. In old French Oak for nine months, it's great to drink now through 2022. Don't forget the candles!

Ch. La Diligente 2015 Puisseguin Saint-Emilion, Bordeaux, France, ($24.99), is a super value 2015 Bordeaux. The Château La Diligente is located on the limestone hill of Puisseguin in the commune of St. Emilion, where the Merlot grapes get a full character of minerality and finesse. Another part of the estate has clay slopes where powerful, concentrated Cabernet fruit is grown. The vines average a mature 40 years of age and bring lots of complexity to the grapes. The 2015 vintage is a blend of 75% Merlot, 20% Cabernet Franc and 5% Cabernet Sauvignon. The wine ages 15 months in 40% new oak barrels. James Suckling scored it 91 points, saying "A silky chele Chiarlo 2015 Cipressi, Nizza, ($25.00). Elegantly structured, delicious and loaded with personality, this benchmark Nizza offers earthy aromas of truffle, leather, game, pressed violet and ripe black-skinned fruit. The aromas carry over red with plum and cherry character. Medium to full body, sleek and fine tannins and a chewy finish. Drink in 2020 when the tannins soften slightly." and Wine Enthusiast Magazine scored it 92 saying "This 30-acre estate offers an excellent wine that demonstrates the balance between the ripeness of Merlot and the more restrained nature of the Cabernets. Add in the barrel aging, and the wine has both structure and elegance. Drink from 2022." Okay, so this one might be for another season, but it's always good to plan ahead!

While they don't get hurricanes in Italy, they still make reds that are great in any kind of weather and one of my favorite winemakers there is Michele Chiarlo. His Barbera wines are some of the best from Italy and one of his better examples is Mi- to the savory palate, along with star anise, black cherry, mature plum and crushed mint. It's balanced by polished tannins and fresh acidity. You won't even notice the wind!

If we survive the season without any hits at all, then you can celebrate with some Sparkling wine. I've mentioned this one before, but it bears repeating. It's local, elegantly structured and a great value. Westport Rivers Sparkling Wine, 2015, Southeast Massachusetts, ($22.99), will surprise and satisfy. A classic Chardonnay-based white, is has a beautiful nose of berries, peaches and a touch of yellow grass. Not even a hint of wind, rain or flooding.

Oh yeah, don't forget batteries, candles and some food, too.

hood stood shoulder to shoulder with its Vietnam Vets and their families to honor its 25 fallen sons. It is a confirmation that, yes, very special people indeed reside here.

As is tradition, the day started off with the Memorial Mass at St. Brigid Church. After the Mass, the crowd moved across to the park for the ceremony. South Boston Vietnam Memorial Committee Chairman Tom Lyons opened the schedule of events, followed by the playing of the National Anthem. Everyone stood in silence and respectful attention and then came the opening prayer.

South Boston's elected officials were joined by Governor Charlie Baker and Mayor Marty Walsh, who shared words spoken from the heart praising the Vietnam Veterans, who came home safely, as well as those 25, whose names are on the monument and were being specially remembered on this day.

The beautiful pomp and ceremony, as it always does, added a special feeling confirming just how important this rededication is and how much it means to so many. This year's ceremony was also dedicated to the late Senator and Vietnam Veteran John McCain. His service was beautifully remembered in a speech by Congressman Stephen Lynch. With flags flying, carried by military color guards, the pipes and drums brought a rush of pride to the attentive crowd.

This year's rededication was highlighted by Keynote Speaker General Joseph L. Lengyl, United States Air Force, who has one of the most impressive military resumes. He was joined by Medal of Honor recipients Tom Kelley and Ryan Pitts.

The traditional calling of the names of the 25 fallen South Bostonians, engraved on the Vietnam

Monument, then began. As each name was called out, a family member placed roses on the site. And then ‘Taps’ was played, in what is always one of the most emotional parts of the ceremony.

As the rededication came to an end, some in the crowd started to leave, many stayed to talk and reflect on the day, shaking the hands of the many Vietnam Veterans in the crowd and thanking them for their service. But whether they left or lingered, it was clear that all who attended this memorial, which has become such an important tradition for so many, felt that they were a part of something very special on this September Sunday and they truly were.

Tom Lyons had the following to say about the ongoing tradition and how successful it continues to be. “The way the crowds continue to turnout each year (after nearly 4 decades), is a tribute to the pride of this neighborhood. It’s healthy for the veterans to see the support that they continue to get, and is very much appreciated by them. It also speaks to the character of South Bostonians that they honor their veterans so respectfully and so faithfully.”

Congratulations are once again in order for the members of the South Boston Vietnam Memorial Committee for who they are and what they have done and still do in keeping their promise to their fallen comrades and to the people who continue to turn out in such large numbers each and every year to support them and to honor those 25 fallen heroes.

Wallace’s “From Broken Glass” Book Back To Southie September 24th

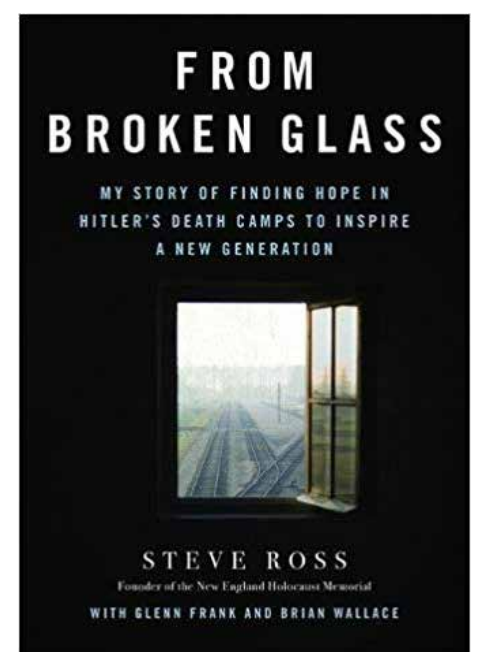

On Sunday, July 29th, the Today Show featured a segment on the book “From Broken Glass” and more importantly on the life of Steve Ross. The show and the book sales went viral, and Amazon was caught totally off guard, as they completely sold out all the books they had within four hours. “From Broken Glass” written by Brian Wallace, Glen Frank, and Steve Ross rose to the #1 Kindle book and the #2 Hardcover on Amazon. It also became the #2 book sold in Barnes & Noble and #1 in Europe.

Amazon has since replenished their stock but the buzz about the Steve Ross book has not died down, and sales are brisk everywhere. Many people from South Boston, where Steve made his name as a youth worker at the Old Harbor project, have already purchased books and are asked to come to the Library on East Broadway on September 24th to have them signed and to listen to a talk by the authors and the film that was shown nationally on The Today Show. If you haven’t purchased a book yet, you will be able to do so that night at the Library and have it signed there.

Brian Wallace sent a special thanks out to his many friends from South Boston who have been so supportive throughout the entire process. “I got a frantic call on July 29th from an old Southie friend, who screamed into the phone that our book was #1 on Amazon. It was funny, but as the song goes, “They’ll make you or break you, but they’ll never forsake you.” No more accurate statement could have been said, written or sung about the people who grew up in South Boston. I sincerely look forward to seeing all of you at the Library on East Broadway on the 24th.

Share the Harbor With Save the Harbor/Save the Bay

On Saturday September 29th, Save the Harbor/Save the Bay will be hosting free "Share the Harbor Cruises" to Spectacle Island, Georges Island, and Boston Light for kids and families from across the city and around the region this fall. The first is a "Treasures of Spectacle Island" excursion, featuring performing pirates, a treasure hunt and songs and stories of the sea.

Though these cruises are free and open to the public, reservations are required. Reserve your space today at <https://tinyurl.com/sharetheharbor-9-29-18>

"These free trips have introduced a whole new audience to Boston Harbor's storied past," said Bruce Berman, Director of Strategy & Communications at Save the Harbor/Save the Bay. "They give all Bostonians and the region's residents the chance to enjoy the recreational and educational opportunities that come with clean water and the success of the Boston Harbor Islands State and National Park."

On Spectacle Island Save the Harbor's staff will help visitors catch striped bass from the pier and identify the artifacts and beach glass they discover on Treasure Beach. Visitors can also hike to the top of the North Drumlin for unbeatable views of the Harbor, city skyline, and surrounding islands, or spend a relaxing day on the beach.

"Spectacle Island's history is as colorful as the sea glass you can find on Treasure Beach," said Chris Mancini, Vice President of Operations and Programs at Save the Harbor/Save the Bay. "However, we do want to remind treasure hunters that they need to leave the artifacts, pottery shards and sea glass they find on the island, for everyone to enjoy."

Save the Harbor's "Share the Harbor" cruises are funded in part by Mass Humanities, which receives support from the Massachusetts Cultural Council and is an affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities. For more information on these free fall follow them on Facebook, Twitter or Instagram or visit their website at www.savetheharbor.org or their blog at <http://blog.savetheharbor.org>

"All of us at Save the Harbor want to thank our partners at Bay State Cruise Company, Mass Humanities, Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts, The Boston Foundation, The Coca-Cola Foundation, and Distrigas/ENGIE for the Leadership Grants that make our youth environmental education and family programs possible," said Save the Harbor's President Patricia A. Foley.

Save the Harbor's Bruce Berman with a large striped bass caught just off Spectacle Island during the annual fall striper migration.

The "Treasures of Spectacle Island" include sea glass, pottery and historic artifacts which help illustrate the story of the transformation of the island from the city dump to the most popular destination in the Boston Harbor Islands State and National Park.

Join Save the Harbor/Save the Bay for a free fall cruise to Spectacle Island on Saturday, September 29th.

SOUTH BOSTON YOUTH SOCCER

Well another year has begun...unfortunately in all the years that I have been involved with soccer, this was the worst weather on Opening Night. However, the first weekend of play had terrific weather. Welcome to all the players and coaches. And a big thank you to all the sponsors.

REMINDERS: PLAYERS & PARENTS:

All children must wear shin guards in order to play. Please no big bows in the hair and no hats.

Plases keep away from the nets when the children are playing their game. We know you want to help your child if they are in goal but most kids get distracted. No smoking near the field. Please go outside the park if you want a cigarette. Finally, remember to have fun.

COACHES:
If you have the first game of the day, please be at the field early to help set up the field. If you have the last game of the day, please put all the equipment away. Please fill out your score sheets correctly and turn them into the clubhouse (there is a box on the counter) or to Dianne Horne at 373 West 2nd Street by Sunday evening.

*This week,
Danny gave "Pic's Picks" for Week 2
in the NFL:*

Before I give you my picks, I have to make a little announcement here. I've signed a new deal with PodcastOne, and part of that deal includes an upgrade for my weekly "Pic's Picks" segment throughout the NFL season.

Every Thursday on the podcast, you're accustomed to hearing me pick five NFL games with the spread. Well, with my new PodcastOne deal, "Pic's Picks" will now be part of the "PodcastOne SportsNet Challenge." I will be competing against other PodcastOne personalities like Shaquille O'Neal, Adam Carolla, Rob Riggle, Ross Tucker, and Chael Sonnen, just to name a few. Every week, we'll each pick five NFL winners, and it'll be presented by BetOnline.

Not much changes for me, except, we aren't using the spread. We're just picking straight up winners. But that's fine, because that makes it easier for me to win. The contest will have a point-based system. We'll each pick four winners and a "lock of the week." You get one point for a regular win, minus one point for a regular loss, two points for a "lock of the week" win, and minus two points for a "lock of the week" loss. You can check out the updated season standings at PodcastOneSportsNet.com.

After Week 1, I'm in a tie for second place with four points. I went 4-1 with my picks, getting my "lock of the week" correct with Green Bay on Sunday night. The only pick I got wrong was New Orleans. They allowed 48 points at home in losing to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Ouch.

But 4-1 isn't a bad way for me to start the season. So, let's keep it rolling. Here are my picks for Week 2:

HOUSTON TEXANS over Tennessee Titans

-As I make this pick on Tuesday night, this game is off the board in Vegas, most likely because of the elbow injury that Marcus Mariota suffered in the Titans' Week 1 loss in Miami. But I'm taking Houston under the mindset that Mariota is playing. The Texans are coming off a Week 1 loss in New England, but when the regular season is over, they might look back and call that the toughest game on their schedule. So, Houston is already battle tested. And Deshaun Watson is ready to go off in Tennessee Sunday at 1 p.m. and pick up his first win of the season.

ATLANTA FALCONS over Carolina Panthers

-The Falcons opened the NFL season by losing an ugly one in Philadelphia last Thursday night. Carolina is coming off an unimpressive 16-8 win over the Cowboys. This divisional showdown could easily be a coin flip, so I do think Atlanta as a (-6) favorite is a little high. Maybe the Falcons should be favored by only three points here. Still, I'm putting my money on Matt Ryan to be more locked in at home Sunday at 1 p.m. than he was in Philly in the opener.

LOS ANGELES RAMS over Arizona Cardinals

-The Rams are a 12-point favorite in this one, and rightfully so, especially in LA Sunday at 4:05 p.m. They are coming off a big win on Monday night in Oakland. LA just has too many weapons, and their defense is dominant. I told you last week that I have the Rams going to the Super Bowl this year, and that Jared Goff will be an MVP candidate. They'll host a Cardinals team that's coming off a Week 1 loss to the Washington Redskins. Arizona has no shot in this one, and it's only a matter of time until we start hearing Larry Fitzgerald trade rumors again.

NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS over Jacksonville Jaguars

-The Pats are a 2-point favorite in Jacksonville Sunday at 4:25 p.m. The Jaguars could be without running back Leonard Fournette, who suffered a hamstring injury in the Jaguars' 20-15 win over the Giants in Week 1. I'm making this pick as if Fournette is playing. It's a rematch of last year's AFC Championship, but I just think that Jacksonville is going to come back down to Earth a bit this year. New England is coming off a big win at home over Houston, the team that I believe will overtake Jacksonville for the AFC South crown. The Patriots aren't losing this one.

LOCK OF THE WEEK: NEW ORLEANS SAINTS over Cleveland Browns

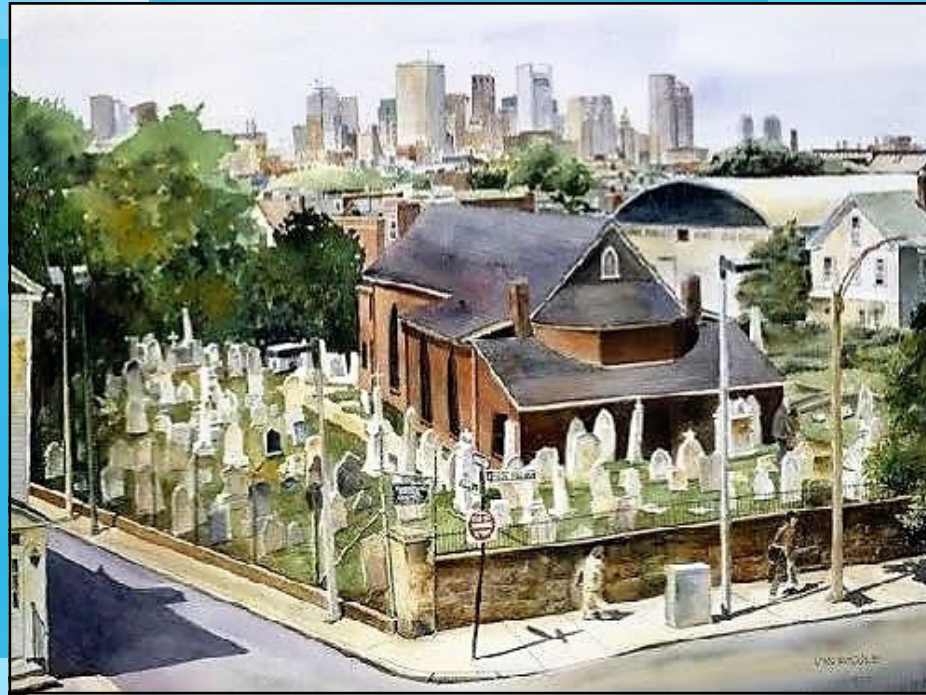

-As I told you, New Orleans was my only loss in Week 1. Well, now the 0-1 Saints are my lock of the week as they host the 0-0-1 Browns Sunday at 1 p.m. New Orleans is a 9-point favorite, and I expect the Saints to win by at least 10. Regardless of the score, there's no way that Drew Brees loses two in a row to Tampa Bay and then Cleveland, both at home. Give me the Saints all day.
